Throughout the Regions Where the Revolutionists Did Some Sharp
Fighting During Past Week.

El Paso, Texas, Nov. 26.—With the whereabouts of Madero, rebel leader, still a mystery, Mexico's most recent revolution has ended after a two weeks attempt to oust Diaz, according to the consensus of dispatches received here. Quiet reigns throughout the whole country and the government troops are controlled.

The sensational report that came from the interior during the past few days have evidently been greatly exaggerated or also the rumors today that all is quiet are untrue. The disappearance of the army which Madero was supposed to have led is another puzzle for the correspondents. It is reported they have gone into the mountains but it is known that many have slipped back into the United States despite the vigilance of the border guards.

From Laredo, Texas, Nov. 26.—Conditions are pacific from one end of Mexico to the other according to passengers interviewed upon their arrival here today. Apparently the passengers make the statement that they hear little or no news of revolution until they reach the border. The night passed without demonstrations of any kind.

Normal Conditions.

WEALTHY MAN FOUND
LIVING AS A TRAMPLost Fortune Several Years Ago and Disappeared—Has Lost His Memory.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
La Crosse, Wis., Nov. 26.—Abner Lottman, formerly a wealthy Minneapolis grain speculator who after being supposed dead for five years and who has been wandering the streets here in the garb of a tramp, may be shocked by mental suggestion into his normal mental state if a novel experiment planned by Dr. S. Greig, a former friend who first recognized him, is successful.

When Frazer, who made a half million in cotton speculation at Chicago, lost it all in a wheat squeeze, after moving to Minneapolis, he vanished. Reports were to the effect he was dead and his family had disappeared. He has not been heard of until recognized here Thanksgiving day.

Frazer had been transformed from the stunt and been speculator of former years to the type of vagabond usually cared for at station houses and city missions. Greig recognized his former acquaintance and assailed him with a flood of questions. Frazer seemed unable to grasp suggestions relating to his former identity. He believed his wife had died in the south six years ago, although she is now living in Chicago. He inquired after his son, A. B. Frazer, Jr., as he would inquire of the health of a mutual friend. Frazer was unable to realize that he had been missing for six years. He is making a pitiful effort to gain a livelihood by selling a collection of books. The former speculator shows signs of suffering and depression.

Greig, who believes Frazer has wandered aimlessly about the country, the victim of almost a total lapse of memory since the crash, is today seeking the man who is still in the city. Greig will recall the wheat "corner," and the man who is alive and other events in an effort to jolt Frazer's mind back into the proper channel.

YOUNG GIRL TO BE TRIED FOR MURDERCase of Hattie Le Blanc, Charged with Shooting Clarence Glover at Boston, Has Extraordinary Aspects.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 26.—The first half of the army and navy game this afternoon ended in no score.
The army was almost continuously on the defensive and neither side showed much ground gaining power. So far it was a kicking game. The Army's handling of punts was superior to the Navy's. The nearest either side came to a score was at the close of the half when the Navy got the ball on fumble only ten yards from the Army's goal.

Early in last period the Navy made the first score of the game, Dalton kicking from placement, making three points for the shipmen.
That was the only score made and the contest ended 3 to 0 in favor of the Navy. The Army at no time had a fair chance to score.

The killing of Glover occurred in his laundry in Waltham on Nov. 29, 1909. In the evening on that date he was shot in his laundry under circumstances shrouded in mystery. The wounded man succeeded in crawling to the house of a physician a short distance away and died soon after he had succeeded in summoning the doctor to the house by ringing the bell.
Just before he expired he is alleged to have declared that he had been shot by Hattie Le Blanc, who is said to have been seen with him some hours previously near the laundry.

So far as can be learned the police have been totally unable to fix any adequate motive for the killing so far as the Le Blanc girl is concerned, despite the statements of the dying man that it was she who fired the fatal shot. Rumors that some member of the dead man's family was closely concerned in the tragedy and that there would be other indictments for the murder have been given wide circulation, but apparently nothing has developed to substantiate those reports.

The Le Blanc girl is a French-Canadian, who came from West Arden, Nova Scotia, to accept employment as a domestic in the Glover home. Her acquaintance with English was very slight and she was known as a quiet, modest girl who bore an excellent reputation. During the year that she has been confined in jail she has won many friends and a large amount of public sympathy. From the time of her arrest she has significantly refused to make any statement concerning the killing of Glover. George P. Kato, a member of the Dominion parliament in whom those who have interested themselves in the girl's case and it is understood he will endeavor to enlist the aid of the Canadian government in her defense.

What is considered one of the remarkable features of the case is the fact that Hattie Le Blanc hid herself in the Glover home for three days and nights after the shooting. On the day of the funeral of the murdered man she was discovered hiding in one of the bedrooms by the underkeeper's assistant. Mrs. Lillian Marie Glover, widow of the dead man declared that the presence of the girl in the home was unknown to her.

GREAT DURBAR ON NEW YEAR'S DAYENGLISH KING AND QUEEN MAY BE PRESENT.

AT GORGEOUS SPECTACLE

Hundreds of Elephants, Caparisoned
in Silk and Gold Will Figure In the Pageant.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

London, Nov. 26.—Official announcement was made this week that the King and Queen hope to visit India to attend the coronation durbar to be held at Delhi, January 1, 1912.
Should the hope of their Majesties be fulfilled they would be well repaid for the long journey to the great eastern empire, for the durbar, it is agreed by all competent judges, affords the most magnificent spectacle to be witnessed anywhere in the world. So elaborate and magnificent is the series of gorgeous scenes making up the spectacle that an entire year is required in the work of preparation.

Within a mighty arena, outside the walls of Delhi, on the day of the great ceremony, ten thousand persons representatives of every race, creed, and color, and including every prince and potentate of India, with jewels worth millions gleaming in turban, on breast and in waistband, will assemble as special guests, and while massed bands play and the regiments stand attention, and while the sun pours down a flood of brilliant light, princes and potentates will pass in review before their Majesties or their chosen representatives, making deep obedience.

The Maharajah of Mysore, ruler of nearly 5,000,000 subjects, will be there with a gorgeous retinue of a thousand attendants. So, too, will be the Gaekwar of Baroda, a most enlightened ruler, and the Nizam of Hyderabad, who holds sway over the great feudatory state which occupies the larger part of the Deccan.

Their Majesties, if they attend the great ceremonial, will enter Delhi seated in a golden howdah on the back of a state elephant. This elephant, known as Modis Lux and belonging to the Maharajah of Jaipur, is the largest in India, and it is worked by the natives as the incarnation of their gods. One hundred elephants will follow the train, while other elephants will raise their trunks and trumpet, and the god-like beast goes by with his imperial burden.

Persons who are familiar with the elephant only in his native untrameled coat of gray can form but a faint conception of the dignity and splendor to which he rises on occasions of great ceremonies in his native land. During the two weeks of solemnity at Delhi "My Lord the Elephant" will be clothed in the robes of his kingdom. His trunk will be mounted with gold and jewels and his back covered with the costliest silken wrappings. Only princes of the blood will be permitted to occupy the gilded howdahs which he will bear.

While the series of pageants will extend over a period of two weeks the great day of all will be New Year's day. At noon, in the great arena, which seats thousands of persons, George V. of England will be proclaimed Emperor of India. At noon their Majesties, or their representatives, will enter the arena to a fanfare of trumpets and take their seats. A brilliant staff and distinguished guests will surround them. A herald, accompanied by four pursuivants, will read in a loud, clear voice, his proclamation in Hindustani:
"George V. of England has deigned to take on himself the title of Emperor of India. Even the princes and people have it so."

Trumpets will blow and the great sundering will rise and sing "God Save the King." When the tumult dies away his Majesty, or his chosen representative, will step to the front of the dais, and in an address will assure the princes and people of India that he will rule them in justice and equity.

For several days after the great ceremony Delhi will continue to be the scene of gorgeous festivities. The whole city and fort will be illuminated. Every building will be outlined in dazzling light. From the top of the ridge—here one commands an excellent view of the entire city, the scene will be one of rare beauty. In the clear atmosphere of the Punjab night every lamp will be visible. Deli will glow like a fairy city raised by a magician of the Arabian Nights.

RAILWAY RATES ARE THOROUGHLY TALKED

Discussion of the Possible Raising or Lowering of the Rates Taken Up Much Attention.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Washington, D. C., Nov. 20.—(Continued from page 1.)—The discussion of the possible raising or lowering of the rates taken up much attention yesterday by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The commission has to pay all the freight rates and how every body along the line adds a little bit more to his bill.

Barlow declared the railroads decided to advance rates on such commodities as they chose to select for advance, while some were unchanged and others reduced. He charged that all proposed increases in rates were imposed on ten per cent of the total tonnage. Railroads charged 55 per cent of the increase against class freight and only 15 per cent against commodities, declared Barlow.

"It is the class freight," Barlow said, "that goes direct to the retailer and thus any increase will be passed directly to the consumer."
"The effect of the proposed increase on shoes already has been demonstrated," he asserted. "It amounts to three mills on each pair of shoes. The manufacturer has therefore increased his price to the retailer 15 cents a pair and required the retailer to charge Mr. Consumer forty cents more the pair."

The shoe case was cited to refute the contention that the increase in rates are "so small that they won't affect the price to consumers." It was declared by the shippers the public will not only have to pay the increase in rates but that everyone who handles the goods will tag on an increase of his own.

It is announced that Senator Albert Cummins of Iowa will appear before the Interstate Commerce Commission to argue against the proposed increase in freight rates.

Cummins has given railroad matters much study and his argument is expected to attract widespread attention. He probably will not appear until after Christmas.

TRAINS COLLIDED IN LOCAL YARDS

Work Train and Extra Freight Train on St. Paul Road Crashed Together Last Evening.

About six o'clock last evening a work train on the Mineral Point division and an extra freight train on the Prairie du Chien division of the St. Paul road met in a head-on collision on the main track near the South Pearl street crossing. The work train was just coming in from the west and the freight train was pulling up into the yards to lay over for the night. Engineer Ed. Smith was running engine 821 on the work train with Conductor Pridenau in charge and Engineer Enders on engine 868 with Conductor Downie of Madison had charge of the freight train. The pilots of both engines were smashed, the frame of engine 868 was sprung, and three freight cars and a gondola in the middle of the freight train were being lifted off the tracks onto the gondola behind it. None of the members of the crews were hurt in the crash and of the two, the 868, a large freight engine, sustained more damage than did the 821 which was but a light freight engine. The curve in the track and the darkness are supposed to have caused the collision which resulted in the smashup. Luckily the wreck did not cause a blockade of traffic, there being a passing track in the yards over which trains from the west were run. The hundred-ton wrecker from Milwaukee came and the wreckage was quickly picked up. A new pilot was put on the 821 and it was sent out on an extra train today, but the 868 was towed into the Milwaukee shops today behind the wreck or.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 20.—Some important decisions bearing on matters of wide public interest are expected to be handed down by the United States Supreme Court, when that body reconvenes Monday after its three week recess.

Long and short haul problems involved in the fourth section of the amended law for the regulation of interstate commerce will be discussed at a conference Monday at the headquarters of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the national capital. World's Best Clock.

The world's best timekeeper is said to be the electric clock in the basement of the Berlin observatory, which was installed by Prof. Foster in 1865. It is enclosed in an airtight glass cylinder and has frequently run for periods of two or three months with an average daily deviation of only fifteen-thousandths of a second.

FALLING HAIR

Easy to Stop it and Make it Lustrous and Beautiful.

If your hair is falling out; if you have dull unattractive hair, or if you need a daily hair dressing read what Mrs. Hattie Hodgman of Nelsonville, Ohio County, Ohio, writes June 2, 1910 about Parisian Sage:

"I used Parisian Sage for falling hair and find it the most thing I ever heard of. My hair was falling out by combing, and I could run my fingers through it and they would hang full of loose hair. I washed my hair and got a bottle of Parisian Sage and used two applications, and I could see a great difference. My hair was lustrous and new and had almost stopped falling out, and by the use of one more bottle it stopped altogether."

For women, for men or for children Parisian Sage is without any doubt the best preparation for the hair. It is guaranteed by the People's Drug Company to stop hair from falling; to eradicate dandruff and stop itching scalp in two weeks or money back. It is a most daintily perfumed and refreshing hair dressing, free from grease or stickiness and ought to be in every home where every member of the family could use it daily. Large bottle 50 cents at the People's Drug Company and druggists everywhere. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package.

INDICT FOUR IN THE I. C. CASE

GRAND JURY VOTES TRUE BILLS AGAINST EX-OFFICIALS OF ROAD.

OSTERMANN CHIEF WITNESS

Ex-Superintendent Buker is included in Similar Papers Drawn on Harriman, Taylor and Ewing for Conspiracy to Defraud.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—Charges that the Illinois Central railroad was mulcted out of approximately $4,900,000 instead of $2,000,000 previously fixed were set up in indictments voted by the grand jury against four former officials of the company. The men indicted are: Frank H. Harriman, former general manager.

Charles L. Ewing, former general superintendent.

John M. Taylor, former general storekeeper.

Joseph E. Buker, former superintendent of machinery.

The indictments charge conspiracy to obtain money from the Illinois Central railroad by means of false pretenses. Two counts in a blanket indictment also contain charges of a confidence game. Each defendant's bond is fixed at $20,000.

December 10, 1909, is the date set in the indictment, which alleges that the Illinois Central railroad was defrauded out of $4,926,050 by the four persons indicted.

The indictment does not set up any specific instances on which are based the charges of conspiracy, but it declares 300 checks, to the amount of $25,000 each; 300 vouchers, each for $25,000, and 300 orders, each for the payment of $25,000 on car-repair bills, were used. This total of $7,500,000 is not accurate, the state's attorney's office said, and is only a basis on which to proceed with the prosecution of the men indicted.

Buker involved by Ostermann.

Buker, who escaped prosecution when arrests were first made in the case in the municipal court, was indicted with the three others, chiefly on the testimony of Henry Ostermann, president of the Ostermann Manufacturing company. Ostermann testified before the grand jury that the money which his concern shared with Harriman and Taylor was given by him to Buker. Buker, he said, divided it with the Illinois Central officials.

The names of the Ostermann Manufacturing company, the Blue Island Car and Equipment company, the Memphis Car company and the American Car and Equipment company are mentioned in the indictment.

KILL ELEPHANT WITH POISON.

500 Grains of Cyanide of Potassium Given to Gypsy Queen.

New York, Nov. 25.—It took 500 grains of cyanide of potassium to kill Gypsy Queen, a trick elephant, in execution of the death sentence passed on her for the murder of her keeper, Robert Schell.

Less than one grain of cyanide of potassium is fatal to a man and the first convulsive symptoms supervene almost before the victim can set down the glass from which he swallows. But the Queen wrenched backward and forward, flapping her big ears, for ten minutes before she showed the least uneasiness, and it was 44 minutes before she was pronounced dead.

The poison was given her in three handfuls of bran mash in which had been sprinkled 100 capsules, each of five grains of cyanide. She had been starved for 24 hours and ate greedily.

MURDER DENIED BY CRIPPEN.

Letter Declares His Innocence Will Be Proved By Time.

London, Nov. 25.—A three-column letter written by Dr. Hawley Crippen to Miss Ethel Le Novo was published in Lloyd's News. The letter says the writer was "the victim of a horrible judicial error" and that facts are yet to come out which will prove Doctor Crippen's innocence of the murder of his wife.

In regard to Miss Le Novo the letter says:

"She has loved me as few women have loved men. My last prayer will be that God may protect her and allow her to join me in eternity."

E. BENJAMIN ANDREWS IS ILL.

Alarm Felt for Former Head of the Chicago Public Schools.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 25.—E. Benjamin Andrews, former chancellor of the University of Nebraska and one-time superintendent of the Chicago public schools, is seriously ill, and his condition, it was learned, is such as to cause his friends concern. Doctor Andrews recently returned from an extended trip abroad in the hope of benefiting his health. Shortly after his return several weeks ago he entered a local sanitarium. He has diabetes. Mrs. Andrews is ill at the same sanitarium.

GAS BLAST TRAPS ELEVEN MEN.

Miners 100 Feet Below Surface Are Believed to Be Dead.

Providence, Ky., Nov. 25.—As the result of an explosion in Mine No. 3 of the Providence Coal Mining company, eleven men are imprisoned 100 feet under ground, and it is believed that all of them were killed outright. So great was the explosion that the mouth of the mine was filled with huge boulders of slate and stone, making it impossible for the men above ground to make a quick entrance into the mine where the men are imprisoned.

HOBBOES HOBNOBDED.

Leaders in the national tramp convention of the New York Bowery. Left to right, sitting, "Hutchins" Hapgood, brother of the editor of Collier's Weekly; "Chuck" Connors, mayor of New York's bowery; Sada-Kitchet Hartman, author and artist; Hoppolyte Havel, Socialist and revolutionist tramp often impersonated in Europe. Standing, Arthur Bullard and Courtenay Lemon.

New York City.—The National tramp convention has passed and several thousands of New York City have been properly humored to the tune of two dollars each. At least such is the version given by Miss Emma Goldman, the famous "red queen," who was present at the meeting and declared the audience had been humored as not a speaker except himself could properly lay claim to being an outcast. At any rate, the crowd which attended the meeting was so great, an overflow session was held and it is estimated that the convention is the richest by several thousand dollars.

The personnel of the leaders is remarkable, including many figures who have made themselves internationally famous by their eccentricities.

Queen a Lover of Art. Queen Elizabeth of Belgium is devoted to art. She is not an artist herself, but she is a keen student of the work of her subjects and passes several hours a day viewing paintings, sculpture and other objects of artistic creation. She buys a great many objects, but in her selection she does not rely on the advice and suggestion of others. To buy what she likes, and her tastes generally are approved by the scholars in Brussels whom she knows thoroughly, and with whom she argues capably on many disputed points. Recently she bought a still life picture painted by Mlle. Renner, a young artist in Brussels, and has hung it in her private apartments. The composition of the painting is one of extreme simplicity, the colors being dark reds and browns.

When One Has Fever. In cases of excessive thirst that arise from feverish conditions the juice of half a lime poured over cracked ice or mixed with charged waters will give relief if slowly sipped a little at a time. It is often found that very hot water taken by the teaspoonful will satisfy thirst more quickly than any other drink. The effect is heightened if a few drops of orange, lemon or lime juice is added or a half teaspoon of baking soda. The main thing in thirst quenching is not to gulp down great quantities of liquid, to take nothing too sweet or too rich and to avoid ice water, which, contrary to usual belief, increases rather than decreases thirst, and against which all doctors fight.

Curious Marriage Custom. The Kurds have a very curious and somewhat dangerous marriage custom which one would think would be more honored in the breach than in the observance. The husband, surrounded by a bodyguard of twenty or thirty young men, carries his wife home on his back in a scarlet cloth and is desperately assaulted the whole way by a number of girls. Sticks and stones are hurled at the bridegroom, who in the coming home with his bride can hardly be considered a very happy man, for the irate amazons often inflict on him marks which he carries to the grave. It may be that among the lady pursuers are some of the bridegroom's former "flames," who turn the mock attack into downright earnest to avenge slighted love.

This Man Just Returned From Cross "S" Ranch Farms

Janesville, Wis., Nov. 25, 1910.

Mr. Ward D. Williams, Northern Manager Cross "S" Ranch Irrigated Farms, Janesville, Wis.

Dear Mr. Williams: It affords me a great deal of pleasure to express to you my appreciation and opinion of Cross "S" Ranch irrigated farms, obtained from a personal visit and investigation of the property during my trip to Texas the past ten days.

I am free to confess that prior to this trip I was somewhat skeptical in regard to representations made by your people.

The best proof of what I think of these farms, is that I have become personally interested and have invested in Cross "S" Ranch farms myself.

I find that all you have represented to be entirely accurate and true, in fact you could have said a great deal more and then not told all of the wonderful possibilities these farms offer to the homeseeker and investor.

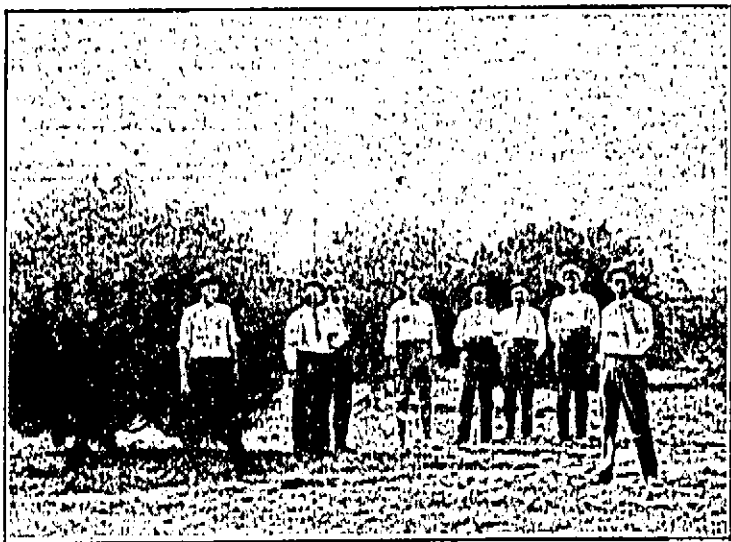

My talks with disinterested parties in no wise connected with the Ranch lead me to believe that in a very short period these farms will double and triple in value.

I would strongly advise all those desiring a home and an absolute safe and income producing investment to take advantage of your proposition before it is too late.

Very truly yours, O. D. BRACE.

SENATOR AND GOVERNOR CLASH AT CONVENTION

Lorimer and Deneen Have Warm Session at St. Louis Over Committee.

St. Louis, Nov. 25.—Senator Lorimer and Governor Deneen struggled for the right to name the representative on the committee on resolutions at the deep waterway convention here and the clash ended in a compromise.

Each side nominated its representative. Congressman Henry T. Rainey was chosen to represent the Lorimer faction and Lehman Randolph was selected by the Deneen followers.

When it came to deciding which of the two representatives should be on the committee the Illinois delegation was unable to agree. Votes were taken by raising up the hand and shouting eyes and noses. When it was seen that a selection could not be made the delegation moved to a distant part of the hall.

On their way there the delegates knocked over chairs and tore the state banners from the standards. The caucus reported that it had agreed on Mr. Randolph on the resolutions committee and Congressman Rainey on the nominations committee.

During the caucus Senator Lorimer and Governor Deneen led their factions in high-pitched voices.

The waterways convention chose Chicago as the next meeting place.

CANNOT PROBE CAMPAIGN FUND.

Attorney General Stead Rules State Commission Without Authority.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 25.—In an opinion by Attorney General Stead he holds that the Illinois civil service commission has no authority to make an investigation of the alleged compulsory contributions to campaign funds by the employees of the state reformatory at Pontiac.

The investigation was demanded by the Illinois Civil Service Reform association. It maintained that it was the duty of the state civil service commission to investigate the alleged campaign contributions at Pontiac and also the state game warden's department.

PARTY LINES ARE TO VANISH.

James J. Hill Sees Result Lesson In Election Valuable.

Washington, Nov. 25.—"The election has taught the politicians and the country something valuable," said James J. Hill, who had a talk with President Taft. "That is that party lines no longer exist to an important extent and that men are thinking, voting and acting along independent lines. Independence of political thought is not confined to business or professional men. It extends to laboring men and all other classes. It is highly probable in a few years there will be little in the way of party lines in the United States."

RULES FOR PUBLICITY OF CORPORATIONS OUT

Stockholders Permitted to See Figures Filed With Federal Bureau—Public Also Favored.

Washington, Nov. 25.—The regulations governing the publicity feature of the corporation tax law, which have excited interest for several months, were promulgated through an executive order signed by President Taft. These regulations were approved by the cabinet. They permit stockholders to get at facts relative to the corporations in which they have investments, and they provide for the opening of the books of the internal revenue commissioner to persons who apply for permission in writing, giving good reasons for their curiosity with respect to corporations that are within the semi-public category—that is, those that have their stocks listed on the exchange or which offer their stock for sale to the public.

First it is provided that the return of every corporation shall be open to the inspection of the officials of the treasury department with a proviso that under certain conditions officials in all other departments of the government shall have a similar privilege. It is desired to inspect the returns for use in any legal proceeding the attorney general must pass upon the application first, after which the secretary of the treasury acts; and the attorney general likewise must pass upon the application by any official of any state or territory for permission to inspect the returns. Next the returns shall be available to any bona fide stockholder of the corporation whose return it is desired to inspect and finally all persons are permitted on written application to inspect the returns of all companies whose stock is listed on any recognized stock exchange and all corporations whose stock is advertised in the press or offered to the public by the corporation itself for sale.

It is the belief of the president that these regulations mark the final step toward securing the needed publicity of the affairs of corporations. The rules will go into effect immediately.

KING'S AUNT IS REPUBLICAN.

Infanta Eulalia to Dinner Says Spain Must Follow Portugal.

Brussels, Belgium, Nov. 25.—Court circles are still talking of the outbreak of Republicanism credited to the Infanta Eulalia, a daughter of King Alfonso of Spain, at a dinner given the American legation in this city. Talk veered to politics, and the aged noblewoman exclaimed to an American official who sat by her side: "Now Portugal is going to prosper Spain will have to come to it."

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 25.—The official count of the votes cast in Douglas county at the recent state election, completed, gives Charles W. As his opponent, Addison Wilt, the Republican, has claimed but 205 plurality, it now appears that Pool is elected. The rest of the Republican state ticket was successful.

Not Ready to Be Finished.

The physician of an up-town hospital in Philadelphia had a surprise the other day over a patient supposedly suffering from a fractured skull. He was taken to the operating room in a semi-conscious condition. Two of the surgical chiefs were there and one of them was just about to begin work on the man when a telegram was handed to him.

After reading it, he turned to the other with the remark, "My father is critically ill in New York; you must finish this fellow."

The man was sufficiently conscious to hear what was said and, understanding the import of the word "finish," jumped from the table and rushed out.

Educated Selling Ability

Suggestions Concerning the Spending of Money For Advertising and the Selling of Merchandise—Business Is No Place For the "Hard Heart" or the "Soft Head"—No Place for Advertising Expenditure.

From swapping jack-knives in buying and selling, from a long "cry," yet in both exist evidences of a striking human trait. Among Americans, especially, there are few who can refrain from an endeavor to exchange something for money or its equivalent. It is an inherent, irremovable instinct.

In other words, we are an essentially producing and trading nation, and with but few exceptions all of us are engaged in creating or selling articles of commerce, or services directly or indirectly connected therewith.

The efficacy of this selling ability may have been taken rather too much for granted in the past. Salesmen and sales ladies have not generally been as intelligently selected as might be; nor have they been given sufficient preparatory education and subsequent training in the business science of selling.

Moreover, many young men of real genius are attracted to various professions as against any form of business, because of the supposed greater opportunity for the exercise of brains.

The typical college "clerk" as his picture comes to mind, is not a particularly admirable example of an occupation requiring mental ability to encourage these young men and women to learn how to sell goods. While it may have been true in times past, but in business, this condition has been replaced by a large extent by the modern development of the art of selling, which consists not in forcing goods upon unwilling customers, but in creating and maintaining a demand for your goods, and in establishing a reputation for your store. Thousands of dollars are spent today upon such a thingy thing as "Impression." Yet when it is considered that the impression the public has of your store either makes customers for you or drives them away, this state of affairs is not surprising.

The permanent and satisfied trade of a customer is now a striven for rather than the single sale. To such an extent is this carried, even in the staple lines, that judgment to prevent overbuying is recognized as one of the necessary qualifications of the modern salesman.

Today, no occupation calls for the exercise of higher order of ability, or offers more opportunity for personal study and improvement than that of the man in charge of the retail store. Good brains are not good enough. The very best brains and heart are not good enough. Think of the power such a store wielded over its customers, if right policies are faithfully carried out!

No Place For "Hard Heart" or "Soft Head."

This man in an organization who directs the flow of goods, by whatever title he is known, should without question possess an educated instinct to sell; but of equal and perhaps greater importance, he should know how to train and direct his force of salespeople. Broad-gauged and liberal, of keen judgment, and large heart, he should realize the full value of the human nature and the needs of a sympathetic understanding of his clerks. Any sympathy with the clerks, should be a source of inspiration to them.

Very little is done by most merchants in the way of educating their salespeople. Green help is hired, put behind a counter and it is left entirely to their judgment and willingness to take proper care of the customer. The green clerk knows nothing about the goods; or about the science of salesmanship.

All clerks should be told, first of all, never to contradict a customer. Marshall Field says that the customer is always right. They should be told to meet all customers pleasantly, to bow to a customer even if they are busy with another at the time. They should try to create an interest in the goods of the store, by explaining the merits of the goods they sell, but they should be taught to know, to analyze and to learn for themselves. Other goods should be suggested to them, "specials" should be called to the attention of the customers.

In many stores get-together meetings are held and "talks" are given to the clerks, explaining the policies of the store, new methods of selling, etc. Many business men make it a point to compliment their salespeople upon results obtained and suggest in a kindly way how even better results may be obtained.

Calling Out the Best in Men and Women.

The salespeople affectionately refer to the manager as the "old man," and eagerly await an invitation for the frequent gatherings where "fresh efforts" are stimulated. There are never colds; yet they know that the eye of the time, and that he will take notice of them all of the time, and that he will take notice of them all of the time, and that he will take notice of them all of the time.

out merchants to the uttermost. Some are too ready to yield to the influence spread about by general debility, while others are not wanting time formulating the standard apology of "hard times," but are redoubling their efforts to create business.

Let Us Ask Ourselves a Few Pertinent Questions. Does my store have a distinct policy of increasing its business? If not, why do we blindly follow the customs of the past?

Are my goods displayed in the most attractive manner? If not, why not follow the example of the best merchandiser you ever heard of?

Do my customers see a general rule return? If not, what steps am I taking to cause them to return?

Are my goods returned to cause them to return? If they are, what is the matter with the goods?

Are my salespeople of an average higher intelligence than my competitors? If not, what plan shall I adopt to train them and retain them?

These questions may seem elemental on the reading, but the answers, if satisfactory, will at least prove to you that your selling end of the business is on a good basis. You will, we think, want to work out selling thoughts which will naturally spring to your mind in contemplating these foundation thoughts. Take, for example, the subject of Impotent Advertising.

Scarcely any cost is so unprofitably, if we may use the word, expended as that of advertising. Our experience shows what we think will be confirmed by most of our readers, that the best advertising, if any, is that which is done in a very little way, if any, uniformly in ideas as to what constitutes the best means of advertising a retail store.

Some manufacturers adopt every form of advertising presented to them by advertising men. Others appropriate a certain lump sum annually to be spent, while others try one kind one year and another the next with no reason other than that no definite increase of sales can be traced to the particular form employed. A tremendous amount of money is actually earned and in bank only to be thrown away in unwise advertising.

The man in charge of advertising will want to study the best way of reaching the public. It is not our intention to do more than direct your attention to this immense waste-hole too frequently seen by intelligent business men.

There is a diversity of opinion regarding the best forms of advertising. Some are in for general publicity, keeping the name before the people, some believe that "bargains" are the only thing that will pull, others believe in reason why advertising, which is an argument and proof, while some maintain nothing, but just advertise because their competitors do.

Each kind of advertising has merit, even the advertising that is brought out because competitors advertise, but in all of these, the greatest force of advertising, the most potent and lasting result from advertising, has not been considered, and that is, "the impression the advertisement makes."

If just the name is kept before the people, it means nothing more than the name.

If bargains are continually advertised and nothing but bargains, the store will get the bargain hunters only.

If good "reason why" advertisements are used, they will be effective, but the ads should not be long, and only one point made at a time.

But if a store will present an advertisement that leaves the impression in the mind of the reader that it is a good store, or that its goods are stylish, or moderately priced, or of fairness in dealings, that advertisement will do more to make a new customer and hold him than any other form of advertising in existence.

An instance of the possibilities of this kind of advertising may be cited in those high class stores that have established a prestige so strong that it enables them to sell merchandise at a price from 25% to 100% higher than the same goods. This class of advertising can be done right here in Southern Wisconsin with equally good results, though time is necessary to accomplish it, and a definite policy must be maintained throughout. It has been done right here in Janesville in one of the most staple lines of merchandise.

The advertising department of The Gazette has spent much time in the study of scientific advertising, and has mapped out and instituted many strikingly good results, though time is necessary to accomplish it, and a definite policy must be maintained throughout. Does Your Power Expense Reduce In Proportion?

In hard times when your factory is running with reduced power, does your power expense reduce in proportion?

If you have taken the time to look it up you have found that it does not fall off nearly so much as you would like to have it.

The reason is that you have a number of large items which are not affected by the decreased demand for power, as your labor charges and your friction load.

If you used individual electric motors your power cost would be in proportion to your output.

Similarly, when good times bring the rush on your factory we can supply you with all the power your machines can use. Incidentally you can provide for extensions at a very moderate cost.

Would you like to try a motor on one of your machines?

THREE DAYS ON PICKET LINE

Captain Relates Some Interesting Incidents While in Front of Petersburg.

Some time about the middle of February, 1865, I was detailed as officer of the picket for duty on the line in our front, extending from the Weldon railroad, not far from the Yellow Tavern on our right, to where we joined the First brigade's pickets of our division on the left. My detail, as I now remember, was about 65 men, some from perhaps every regiment of our brigade, writes G. M. Michelberg, captain Company G, Sixth Maryland, in National Tribune. When we arrived at the reserve picket post I was met by a captain of the One Hundred and Tenth Ohio, who had his reserve in line to receive us, when he gave me the number of men on duty. My first relief was soon detailed, and in charge of a sergeant, accompanied by a sergeant who was to direct the new pickets to their posts and take charge of the old picket. The captain proceeded to give me the orders to the officer of the picket. He told me of the placing of videts at night, and the persistent custom of the Johnny pickets of trading with the boys; and you boys who ever did picket duty along the front of our corps will remember how very close our picket lines were about that time. The captain insisted the practice of trading should be broken up, but in my mind I right there secretly decided I would have some rebel news that night. I Johnny asked a certain videt whom I had in mind for a trade. I therefore selected from my old company D, Sixth Maryland, one John Travers, whom I knew was equal to any emergency that might arise, and had him detailed on first relief on videt, with instructions to trade anything the Johnnies proposed. Next, Joe Lyler, also of Company D, Sixth Maryland, was sergeant of the first relief picket, and I posted him to answer promptly any call from any of the videts, but to positively disallow any trading or any communication from any of the videts. Travers, of course, excepted. There were several calls to the first relief videt from the rebel pickets, but all efforts to communicate for trade except from Travers's post was sternly refused. John answered his man and allowed him to approach. His proposition was to trade tobacco for coffee, salt or sorrel. John agreed, provided he brought him a Richmond paper of that day's date. Sergt. Lyler took coffee and salt, and returned later with a fine lot of chewing and smoking tobacco, and a copy of the Richmond Whig. We had some interesting reading the next day.

I should also state that in the instructions given me, I was told that every evening, before night, the rebels would call to us, saying: "Yanks, are you ready to chop wood?" That no arrangement had been entered into for a detail from each picket to meet

His Proposition Was to Trade Tobacco in a grove immediately in front of our reserve post and chop trees for wood for the reserves for the next 24 hours. At the usual time the call came to our picket, and the word soon came to me for orders. I told them to answer: "Yes," and about my entire reserve wanted to go. This, of course, I did not allow, but permitted about ten men, without arms except one ax, to go, and ordered the rest of the reserve in line with arms. We soon saw the rebel detail coming, a half dozen or more unarmed and four guards, equipped, in charge of a lieutenant. He directed the wood chopping, and a pine tree, perhaps eight inches in diameter, was selected and soon cut down. Then he stepped off perhaps ten feet, and set a man to chopping, then another, and when the tree was cut up he set two other men to cut down another, and ordered a detail from each army to carry the divided portions to the reserve post and return for the next tree.

"PORK BARREL" HAS STARTED A CONTEST

Rivers and Harbors Committee Plan To Oppose Taft's Views On Subject.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 25.—That a fight against President Taft's plan to eliminate the "pork barrel" will begin early in the coming session of congress became known today following the declaration of several members who said a preliminary agreement had been reached by which the house committee will frame an original rivers and harbors bill carrying about $30,000,000. With the usual additions to the early estimates and the increases made by the senate, the total would be raised to between forty and fifty million dollars. President Taft has repeatedly declared he will not sign another "pork barrel" rivers and harbors bill. When he affixed his signature to the measure carrying $52,000,000 at the last session, he sent to congress a note saying: "I once reached a conclusion that it was my duty to interpose a vote in order, if possible, to secure a change in the method of raming these bills. Subsequent consideration has altered my view of my duty." The president then withheld his veto because there had been no rivers and harbors bill for three years and his failure at that time would have embarrassed the engineers seriously.

President Taft's idea is that the money should be used for prompt completion of the more important projects and that the scattering appropriations for projects which have been dragging along for years should be withheld. It is his plan to allow appropriations only for projects recommended for completion by a board of engineers. It is pointed out that Taft's plan "places congress in the dilemma of pinning many members of the senate necessary to their political lives," or of losing the entire bill. Representatives in districts having doubtful projects will insist that their appropriations go into the measure and that congress shall risk the veto or attempt to pass the bill over a veto. Senator Burton of Ohio, one of the highest authorities on rivers and harbors in congress, is a staunch supporter of the president in this matter and is prepared to meet a strong fight against any "pork barrel" appropriations.

THEIR MAJESTIES' CHRISTMAS CARDS

Historic Episodes Figure in Designs Selected by King George and Queen Mary. (SPECIAL TO THIS GAZETTE) London, Nov. 25.—Though the custom of giving presents at the "Merry Yuletide" is said to be dying out, this is not the case with King George and Queen Mary, who are already preparing to remember not only their friends but all those who have rendered good service to them during the year. As many of the relatives and friends of their majesties reside at points far distant from England it is necessary that the presents for them be dispatched several weeks before Christmas. The King has ordered hundreds of articles to be sent to him by London tradesmen, jewelers and art dealers, and from these he will make his selections. Queen Mary has personally supervised the getting up of her own Christmas card this year. Her majesty spent many days in thinking out an appropriate design, and had hundreds of suggestions and sketches submitted to her. Her final design is a picture by John H. Bacon of the Royal Academy, representing Prince Charlie taking leave of Flora McDonald on his escape from Scotland. King George has selected a card representing King Henry VIII visiting Cardinal Wolsey at Hampton Court.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

"WHO IS MY NEIGHBOR?"

I was on my way downtown one morning when, on the doorknob of the third house from mine, I saw that sad signal of bereavement—Crape and ribbons.

There was nothing uncommon about that—in the city. But it was so close to where I lived. The crape shocked and reproached me. I halted.

The people of the place were unknown to me. I had seen them only occasionally in the few months they had lived there.

Going up the steps, I rang the bell. Introduced myself and asked if I could be of any service.

Afterward I spoke to others of the neighborhood who entered, and several of us attended the funeral service.

A boy had died after several weeks of sickness. I did not know any one was sick there. Within a red or two of my home one had sickened and died and I did not know!

Going on my way that morning I tried to excuse myself and the others. I said to myself that in the city it is a physical impossibility to know the people among whom you live. Folks come and go. Perhaps you do not know the name of the next door dweller or those who live above you or below you in the flat.

It is the way of the city. And a cruel, heartless way it is. With the human life swarming with people the word neighbor has no significance. Those who are your friends live perhaps across the city or miles away.

I said to myself—Suppose that poor boy had been so ill in a town or in the country. Every one would know and sympathize. Delicacies would be sent. Neighbors would sit up and relieve the tired parents.

And as I thought of the hard ways of metropolitan life—ways caused by hard heartedness, but by neglect and thoughtlessness—the old, old question asked itself:

"Who is my neighbor?"

And I thought of the wonderful story of the Jericho road and the man who fell among thieves and of the good Samaritan.

And, measured by the application of that story, I wondered if, somehow, we unneighborly city dwellers, so forgetful of our common human obligations, would not be included in the condemnation visited upon the priest and the Levite who passed by on the other side.

COLLEGE FRATERNITIES SUBJECT AT CONFERENCE.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] New York, Nov. 26.—The problem of college fraternities was thoroughly thrashed out today at a meeting of the Interfraternity Conference held at the University Club in this city. Dr. Hamilton W. Mabie presided over the meeting, which was attended by representatives of more than a score of the prominent Greek letter societies of American colleges.

"I WILL FOREWARN YE WHOM YE SHALL FEAR" (Bible.) Lay the foundations deep my brother. Lay the foundations deep. The faith that was sealed on calvary. The body and soul can keep. Even the midst dread spirit of fire. Cannot overcome its power. And the crucified flesh, though it proleth not—

"I will hold to the dying hour. Ye cannot die, for the spirit saved joins hands, with the soul that was true. And a perfect creature, His is head, undivided, unburdened, to view. Then lay the foundations deep, my brother.

Lay the foundations deep. The faith that was sealed on calvary. The body and soul can keep. Centuries long, the striving ones, have sought to find the cure. To heal the wounds, the fallen find, are surely slain I here.

"I found at last my brother dear. Found close to the cross, as then. 'Tis where the foundations are deep. You'll find the glittering gem. Then lay the foundations, far back of the mind.

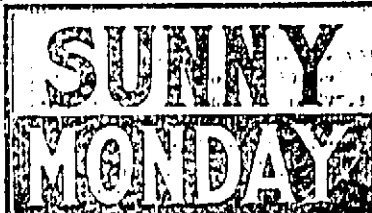

In the fertile soil of a soul made pure. I will hold secure from Eden's wreck And the vortex of life as you see the reward.

You'll find you shall surely reap. The sweet promised rest is brought to the earth. By laying foundations deep. —By Frances Warren.

Chiropractic Science

THE WONDER OF THE AGE—FILLS THE HOPELESS WITH HOPE. TELLS THE DESPAIRING TO FORGET DESPAIR. MAKES WELL MEN AND WOMEN OF SICK AND AILING ONES.

Hundreds of Sick Ones Dragging Out a Miserable, Weary Existence, Suffering and Hopeless Have Been Restored to Health By the Chiropractic Adjustments—No Medicine—No Cutting—No Mystery—Simply Common Sense—That's All. If You Cannot Come to Our Office, Write At Once.

It's merely a question of taking the right course if you wish to be well. Most of you know how much help you can get from the "professionals."

Chiropractic, the science to which we devote ourselves, is not medicine or medical treatment—far from it; it's the sensible, sure and perfect way to be rid of disease.

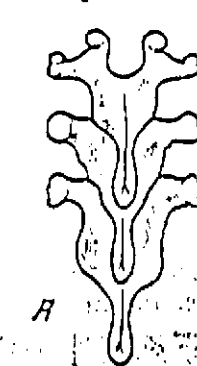

Many of your neighbors and friends have proved the efficiency of the Chiropractic Science in removing disease. It's a matter of importance to you to be well—will you take the same step that they did? If so, come to us.

Please understand that Chiropractic is not treating "symptoms" nor experimental work on a patient's body or pocketbook. It's a downright, straight from the shoulder, positive manner of removing disease from the human body by natural, common sense methods.

Through the Chiropractic science the cause of all diseases are removed and sufferers made well—Asthma, Appendicitis, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Lung Troubles, Heart Disease, Stomach Troubles, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Bowel Complaints, Kidney and Bladder Diseases, Liver Troubles of Women, Female Weakness, Epilepsy or Fits, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Eruptions, Muscular Troubles, Etc., Etc.

Let Us Illustrate One Case

Take the death of the late King Edward of England. He had Bronchial and Lung trouble. The very best doctors and specialists in the world were unable to do anything for him, and he died. If the best medical men in the country were unable to save the king's life, it shows pretty conclusively that the theory of medicine is wrong. Now to explain our science, note the two illustrations.

These drawings show the vertebrae in correct position and in misplaced position. A severe cold, coughing excessively, a fall or accident or continued straining of the back in a certain position will displace a vertebra as well as other more serious causes.

See drawing "B," the misplaced vertebra. The arrow "1" points to the side of the vertebra tipped down. Note the small space between the two vertebrae. Hundreds of nerves pass through this space leading to the bronchials. The small space pinches the nerves and they cannot perform their proper functions. The bronchials become weakened due to lack of nervous energy and soon become diseased. Arrow "2" points to the other side of the same vertebra tipped up, showing the small space through which the nerves to the lungs must pass. Because the space is so small the nerves cannot furnish energy to the lungs and the lungs become weakened and diseased through lack of energy.

It was these vertebrae out of place that caused King Edward's death.

Drawing "A" shows the vertebra in correct position with normal space on both sides so that the nerves have room to act naturally, thus keeping themselves in a healthy condition.

Chiropractic (ki-ro-prak-tik) adjustments straighten out the vertebrae, thus removing the cause of the disease.

If you are sick and ailing you owe it to yourself to INVESTIGATE the most wonderful science of the age. We know that if you will INVESTIGATE you will surely come to us to be made well. Hundreds are coming every month and they are being made vigorous and healthy AND HAPPY. A call at our office to "talk it over" will cost you nothing and places you under no obligation to us. Call tomorrow or write us at once if you are unable to call.

Lord Loveland Discovers America

By C. N. AND A. M. WILLIAMSON

Copyright, 1910, by Doubleday, Page & Company, Copyright, 1908, by the McClure Company

"Well, go on being my friend and give me good advice, please," said

"ARE THERE MANY OTHER GIRLS IN THE STATE AS BEAUTIFUL AS SHE?"

Loveland, "There's Miss Coolidge too. She's a beautiful creature. Are there many other girls in the States as beautiful as she?"

"As beautiful, but few more beautiful."

"Any beautiful ones richer?"

"I'm not up in that kind of statistics. Major Cadwallader Hunter is."

"Yes, but I don't care for the fellow. I'd rather counsel with you. Do you know Miss Coolidge?"

"No."

"I wish you did."

"Would you like me to use my influence with her?"

"I should like you to use your influence with me to keep me up to the mark. She's rather hard to talk to—so different from you."

"She knows her value. She's worth several millions, as we say in America—I wish we didn't. Why should she worry to make herself agreeable? She can get all the attention she wants without bothering, whereas we poor girls have to work hard if we want to be popular in spite of our poverty."

"I suppose there's something in that," said Loveland, too deeply absorbed in his own affairs not to take her in earnest. And the girl would have liked to turn a scornful shoulder upon him if he had not been so handsome and if he had not been so handsome.

"He is a perfectly worthless young man," she reflected savagely, yet she did not tell him, as he deserved, that she had reconsidered and would not, after all, undertake the extra hard work of being his guide, philosopher and friend.

At first all the girls had admired Loveland not only because he had a title, but because he was himself, and some of the younger ones, like Fanny Milton and Madge Beverly, had been inclined to regard him as a starry paladin. Fanny said he was "so handsome it almost hurt" and that she "could hardly talk to him for gazing at his Gibson chin." But when the more sophisticated Eva Turner, Elinor Coolidge, Kate Wood and a few others realized that their starry paladin was impudently inspecting them all with a view to the possible purchase of the most satisfactory each began to hate him secretly with forty woman power, secretly because there was a kind of glory in him as an asset. They were worried though good hearted girls to whom Major Cadwallader Hunter had introduced his prize, and they foresaw that handsome Lord Loveland would be petted, perhaps fought for, in society when he had left the little world of the Mauretania for the bigger world of New York. There would be an advantage in having known him first in case he should become the "rage," as he was sure to do if not too insufferably rude and offensive. Thinking of this, each girl clung to her share of him and refrained from trampling on the expensive doll, as, for her pride's sake, she used to do.

Val was aware of the hatred, but conscious of the rivalry, and was altogether kept very busy. He forgot to Marconi to his mother that he had sailed on the Mauretania, as Jim Harbrough had thought he might forget. As for writing, he had not a moment for any such sedentary employment.

Then presently the largeness of the great city loomed monstrous, mountains in purple shadow against such a blue sky as Italy and New York knew.

A crowd was massed on the dock to welcome the Mauretania and her passengers, and for the first time since he had left England Val felt a vague homesickness stirring in his breast. Almost every one else on board seemed to have at least one handkerchief waving friend, and some had half a dozen, but all the smiling, eager faces looking up were strange to his eyes. "There was no one for him, and he had a sudden, queer sensation of not being at home in the world—in this spite of invitations from everybody he had met on the ship—except one—the one who mattered."

Mr. Coolidge and several other fathers and uncles of pretty girls had asked him to make their homes his home, but he had taken Jim Harbrough's advice to heart and excused himself warily. His idea was to let New York society pass before his eyes in review before risking a premature entanglement. To this course he committed himself in cold blood. Since he could not have Lesley Dummer, all that mattered to him in a girl was decent manners, decent looks and—money millions.

He had planned a moonlight farewell for the night before, but Lesley thwarted him by talking the whole evening long with a sporting youth whom Val wretchedly stigmatized in his mind as suffering from motor bicycle face, bridge eye, clutch knee and tennis elbow. Then when she had tired of her flirtation she went to bed.

Next morning it was only as the Mauretania neared her slip that the girl appeared again. Without seeming to notice Loveland she stood leaning her elbows on the rail not far from him. It occurred to Val that after all it was a matter of no importance to her that their lives were to be lived apart. And the separation was at hand. He had thought of this hour, but now it was here. He was going to love her. Tomorrow and all the tomorrows he would have no sweet, merry, mysterious eyed friend to advise him and listen, half amused, half in earnest, to his confidences.

Suddenly his heart felt like a large cold belted boot root in his breast. He went and stood behind the girl, dumb with a strange new misery he could not understand, and, as though she had heard the "unerring speech" of his silence, she turned.

At first her beautiful brown eyes flashed a laughing challenge at him as if she said: "Wouldn't you like to make me think you really care? But I don't think it and won't. And neither do you care. We've both been playing."

Then something in his look softened hers. She smiled kindly, though not wholly without guile.

"Aren't you excited?" she asked.

"Why should I be excited?" he grumbled.

"Because—well, you're a soldier and know what war is like. I've heard that the most exciting thing which can happen is a call to make a sortie in the middle of the night, in the midst of a dream—and on an empty stomach. But I should think the call to a matrimonial sortie—"

"On an empty purse?"

"Yes, when it's a question of selling yourself to fill it."

"I don't mean to sell myself. I shall still belong to myself and to one other. I won't say who that other is, for I've pretty well told you already."

"It's no use pretending not to understand. I know what you want me to think you mean."

"If I never knew before how much I do mean it I know it now, when I've got to my goodby."

"Look here, Lesley—do look at me. I'm awfully cut up at leaving you."

"You're not to call me Lesley."

"You can't prevent my calling you Lesley to myself."

"You'll soon forget the name."

"Never. I can never forget you—worse luck. The thought of you is going to come between me and other things."

"The thought must learn better manners—not to 'butt in,' as we say over here. Oh, it will soon be tamed. You'll have so much to do."

"I hope I shall," said Loveland. "I say, are you going to forget me as soon as we're parted?"

The girl was silent for a moment. Then she laughed. "I shall make a note of you for my next story but one," she answered.

"You're not very kind."

"Are you sure you deserve kindness?"

"I'm sure I want it—from you."

"You have always got what you wanted in your life, haven't you, one way or another?"

"Life wouldn't be worth living if one didn't."

"Oh, it's not much good saying to you that that's a selfish way of looking at life. But you've never had any lessons, and I suppose you never will have. You'll go on getting what you want."

MOST CERTAIN WAY TO END A BAD COLD

Surely breaks the most severe cold and ends Grippe misery in just a few hours.

It is a positive fact that a dose of Pape's Cold Compound taken every two hours—until three consecutive doses are taken—will cure Grippe or break up the most severe cold, either in the head, chest, back, stomach or limbs.

You distinctly feel the cold breaking and all the disagreeable grippe symptoms leaving after the very first dose. It promptly ends the most miserable headache, neuralgia, runny nose, sore throat, stuffy nose, feverishness, sneezing, sore throat, running of the nose, mucous catarrhal discharges, soreness, stiffness and rheumatic twinges.

Pape's Cold Compound is the result of three years' research at a cost of more than fifty thousand dollars and contains no quinine, which we have conclusively demonstrated is not effective in the treatment of colds or Grippe.

Take this harmless Compound as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine made anywhere else in the world, which will cure your cold or end Grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25-cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which, any druggist in the world can supply.

want not taking it for granted that you ought to get it till the end."

"I hope so sincerely," said Val with out shame. "But I shall get one of the things I want most unless you promise to write to me."

She shook her head. "I can't promise that. I wouldn't if I could. As for getting your news, I shall read it in the papers, which are sure to chronicle all Lord Loveland does and says and a lot he doesn't do or say. I shall see rumors of your engagement, then an announcement. I wonder if it will be the survival of the prettiest—Miss Coolidge or if you'll be knocked down—on your knees—to a higher bid?"

"You're not letting me get much pleasure out of my last moments with you," he complained; his blue eyes really pathetic. "Do you despise me, after all?"

She looked up at him. "Only one side of you," she answered a little sadly. "But you're rather like the moon. We see only one of her sides. The other we have to take on faith. Perhaps it's silly of me, yet sometimes, in some moods, I do take your other side on faith."

"What is there on that side?" he asked eagerly.

"I don't know. And I'm sure you don't. You probably never will, for the light shines so brightly on the one turned toward the world. Now it must be 'goodbye.'"

"Don't forget me. Think of me sometimes," Loveland implored as he wrung the little hand she held out.

"I will think of you sometimes," she said as if mechanically repeating the words.

"Try to think the best of me."

Lesley and Mrs. Loveland all got their luggage dumped down under letter "D" before a single "I" box had appeared. Then when Val's did come and the property of other impatient "L"s at the same time the outside world was lost to view. Loveland got hold of a good natured custom house man, who, considering the indubitable fact that he was dealing with a "British subject and belonging to the 'fish-lake'" statement that he was merely on a visit to America, made no unnecessary trouble.

Very few minutes were wasted in the examination, though Americans all around were suffering severely. Nevertheless, when his keys were in his hand again and Val was ready to separate himself and his belongings from the seething mass of anxious "L"s, Miss Dummer and her aunt had vanished off the face of the dock.

History of a Wedding Ring.
The ring used in the wedding of Sir Harry and Lady Verney is a ring which has been used for centuries in the wedding ceremonies of the family, and is cherished as a precious heirloom, says the Pall Mall Gazette. It contains an excellent miniature of Charles I., encircled with diamonds, and was given by that monarch to Sir Edmund Verney, his marshal and standard bearer, who fell at Edge Hill on October 23, 1642. Sir Edmund's body was never found, only a severed hand bearing on one of its fingers this very ring, which was soon identified as his. The hand was buried in the family burial place, and the ring has during succeeding generations been religiously treasured by the owners of Claydon house.

To Break a Bottle Evenly.
Soak a piece of string in turpentine and tie it around the glass just where you wish the break to come. Then fill the glass or bottle up to the point with cold water, and set fire to the string. The glass will snap all along the heated line.

Cultivate Decline.
Indecision soon grows to be a vice. Sometimes it is the mark of a weak character—often it develops a weak character.

Work Long Hours.
Most workers in Switzerland are employed about eleven hours a day.

That Cold Room
on the side of the house where winter blasts strike hardest always has a lower temperature than the rest of the house. There are times when it is necessary to raise the temperature quickly or to keep the temperature up for a long period. That can't be done by the regular method of heating without great trouble and overheating the rest of the house. The only reliable method of heating such a room alone by other means is to use a which can be kept at full or low heat for a short or long time. Four quarts of oil will give a glowing heat for nine hours, without smoke or smell.

An indicator always shows the amount of oil in the font. Filler-cap does not screw on; but is put in like a cork in a bottle, and is attached by a chain and cannot get lost.

An automatic-locking flame spreader prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so that it can be cleaned in an instant.

The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, and can be unscrewed in an instant for reworking. Finished in Japan or nickel, strong, durable, well-made, built for service, and yet light and ornamental. Has a cold handle.
